When Miss Emma Juch was served with a summons in Indianapolis the other day to answer a suit on a personal note of $2,000 she "burst into tears." When Miss Juch left her chorus girls in St. Louis without a cent they likewise burst into tears. Tear jugs in the Juch camp are evidently not hard to burst.

The St. Louis Chronicle contains an interesting tale of a man who fell in love with the statue of Venus. There is no doubt but that a statue of Venus is more attractive to the average man than the living St. Louis girl, but at the same time there is also no doubt but that the "boss liar" has his headquarters in the St. Louis Chronicle office.

The teacher's contest has reached a place in its history in which everybody is talking about it and by the time the polls are closed there will be an interest in it which will be surprising to everybody. In one package 272 votes came in yesterday and the friends of the respective teachers are working with might and main in the interests of their favorites. Such contests are productive of good results in more ways than one, but the chief good lies in the fact that the teacher in the schools is appreciated and her responsibilities recognized.

sleep studying how to make themselves pleasant and agreeable to their neighbors. South Bethlehem, Pa., has a citizen in this class. His next door neighbor wished to put new weather-boards on his house, which was built on the line of the lot. The citizen whose lot he joined, objected to the use of his ground for the necessary scaffolding. The other is now moving his house four feet for this purpose, and when the weather-boarding is on it will be moved back to the line. Which proves that our lines does not always win and that there is more than one way to clap-board a house.

In another column of the BAZOO will be found a strong appeal for the proposed reunion of the Blue and the Gray in this city in July and as it is written by an old soldier—one who fought under the Stars and Stripes, it is well worthy of attention. He says truly "we are re-united under one flag" and this fact should melt away all petty prejudices and when the time comes for assembling here, the Cross and the Crescent should shine together in the firmament of peace and their effulgent rays should mingle with the smoke of one common campfire, whose sentries are friendship and whose memories are founded not on the hates of war, but upon the loves of a nation which has one flag and one God.

"Ouida" raises her protest against the flood of fiction that is pouring upon the public in the name of literary art, says the Chicago Times. She declares that 95 per cent of the novels published now-a-days are trash, sickening rubbish and empty nothings. For their existence she lays the blame upon syndicates, which encourage fledglings in art and engage to market their unripe fruit. Good for "Ouida!" It does not militate against her stricture that many people express disgust with her own literary products and rank them with the rubbish of the day. Better "Ouida's" poppies, butterflies and Italian laziness, spiced with naughtiness, than the insane pen-work of the average popular novelist.

The United States supreme court has again decided what may be called the law of original packages. Its first decision was that the law of Iowa prohibiting the sale of liquor was an interference with the freedom of commerce between the states. This was generally looked upon as a very serious attack upon the right of a state to exercise its own police powers. One may or may not believe in prohibitory legislation, but until the announcement of the original package decision it had always been assumed that each state might determine the question for itself. The supreme court, in deciding that an Iowa saloon-keeper might sell the liquor that he bought in another state in the original packages in which it came, greatly changed, if it did not nullify the state statute. Congress came to the relief of the states and enacted a law providing that any original package brought into the state shall be subject to the state laws regulating the sale of similar property manufactured within the state. And this statute has been declared to be constitutional. The law is now what nearly all lawyers thought it was before the first decision, but it has been made so by legislation—a dangerous method of preserving our constitutional limitations.

There is an old adage that "What everybody says must be true." Henry Cook, the leading merchant of New Knoxville, Ohio, says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has taken well here, everybody likes it. They say it gives immediate relief." That is what makes it so popular. It is prompt in relieving a cough or cold and can always be depended upon. There is nothing that will loosen and relieve a severe cold so quickly. For sale by Aug. T. Fleischmann, Druggist.

Raw As Beef-Steak.

Baby's Fearful Suffering from Skin Disease Covering Entire Body Cured by Cuticura.

My baby was taken very sick when he was three months old, and in a few days began breaking out. We employed both of the house doctors, and they could do nothing for him. Then we sent for the best doctor in Eaton Rapids, Mich., and he doctored him for two weeks, and he got worse all the time; and then I took him to Jackson, to a doctor who attends especially to skin diseases, and then he got worse than ever. Then I took my baby to the Cuticura Remedies any way; did not have any luck; they would do any good but in less than two months from the time we began giving them to him he was entirely well, and not a spot on him. His hair began growing right off, and we thought he would always be bald-headed. There was not a spot on his whole body, face, and head, only his nose and eyes, but what was as raw as beef-steak. So poor there was not anything but bones, and so weak he could raise neither hand nor head.

BAZOO GOSSIP.

The Gossiper wants to know what has become of the court house band stand proposition? The Sedalia bands are willing to volunteer their services on summer evenings, and it only devolves on the county court to do their part. Concerts in the court house square would be hailed with delight by hundreds of people.

A certain eminent Sedalia lawyer, invariably wears a rose-bud or a small flower of some kind in the lapel of his coat. The Gossiper has been told that his excellent wife pins it there every morning before he leaves home for his law office or the court room. The custom is a pretty and pleasurable one, and might with all "sweet reasonableness" and propriety be practised by many other wives in Sedalia.

Have you thought of the striking similarity in the manner of the death of Secretary Windom and that of Judge Breckenridge? Both of them died within a few weeks of each other.
Secretary Windom had just closed a remarkably able and eloquent address before a large assemblage of gentlemen in New York City, when death smote him and he fell back in his seat, never to utter another word.

Judge Breckenridge had just concluded a powerful address to the Presbyterian general assembly at Detroit last Friday afternoon, when he reeled from the platform and fell prostrate, dying in less than ten minutes.

Both Windom and Breckenridge were men of national reputation, were fine speakers, and both arose in glowing spirits and robust health to deliver what they did not suspect would be their last utterances of any kind on earth.

James Whitcomb Riley, the Indiana dialect poet, has many admirers in Sedalia and his books are to be found in numerous local libraries.
In reference to his contemplated trip to Europe, Eugene Field writes the following:

We wonder how much truth there is in the report that James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet, is going to visit Europe. Answering that question, Consul General New remarked to the writer about a year ago:
"What under the sun would Jim Riley do here in London? Why he couldn't find his way from the Strand into Fleet street! We would have to force of Scotland Yard on his trail to prevent him from getting lost! I know Jim Riley better than anybody —have had him in tow for about fifteen years; and I tell you that in "flairs of the world he is a veritable child. He wouldn't be here in London twenty-four hours before he'd begin to beat like a hungry calf for the pasture lands and pawpaw groves of Indiana."

There are two ex-Confederate residents in Sedalia, who went into the Southern army, from Lynchburg, Virginia. One of them, Mr. George Turnell, was learning the printer's trade when Sumter was fired on. He was but sixteen years old at the time.
He joined J. E. B. Stuart's famous cavalry, participated in the battles of Bull Run, the Peninsula, Chancellorsville and others. In a bloody cavalry engagement at Aldie in June, 1863, between Stuart and Kilpatrick, he was captured and taken to Johnson's Island, where he was held a prisoner twenty-two months. He came out of the war a first Lieutenant.

Captain Holland, the other Lynchburg, the story of the tragic death of Homer Rogers a boy sixteen years old, in the recent Boone county cyclone, as related by Mason Jarman, was overheard by the Gossiper:

Br ther Tom had gone over to John Jarman's about half a mile away, and Homer Rogers, who was visiting us, was with me on the place. When the storm came up we went into the house. We soon realized that the building was going to be blown away and when the roof was lifted off we ran out the door. It was simply awful outside but we knew it was sure death to remain in the house. I turned to Homer and said "O Lord, what will we do?" and he replied not to get excited. We locked arms and laid flat on the ground. The cyclone raged with such terrible fury that I did not know what transpired until it passed over. When I was able to get up Homer was lying a few feet away, his skull crushed and the brains oozing from his head. He had been killed instantly. Although the air was full of flying timbers young Jarman escaped without so much as a bruise.

burger, enlisted in 1861, and served in all the great battles up to and including Gettysburg. He was desperately wounded in the legs at Gettysburg, he was struck in the face by a minnie ball, the honorable scar of which he still carries. He was left on the field as dead and was captured, but was soon paroled. He went into the service, under Longstreet, a private and rose to the grade of captain.

Mr. J. L. Thornton, of Sedalia, was for a long while a resident of Indiana, and is a personal friend of Bill Nye and the Rev. Myron W.
Reed, the latter formerly of Indianapolis and now of Denver, and who is quite aptly called "the Talmage of the West."

Mr. Reed, who is famous both as a pulpit orator and as the writer of many fugitive gems, is described as a plain-going, familiar, homely kind of a man, who makes himself on easy terms with high and low, rich and poor.

"One Memorial Day," said Mr.
Thornton to the Gossiper, "Nye and Reed were walking arm in arm down Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, when they met a typical old hoosier farmer. Reed spoke to him and the result was that the three gentlemen halted and engaged in a conversation, beginning with the weather as a topic.

"It's going to rain to day," said the old farmer.
"What makes you say that?"
asked the minister. "The sky is clear and there is every prospect of fair weather."

"Yes, but it has rained every Memorial day I've ever seen yet," replied the farmer, "but me and my old woman go over to Crown Hill yonder, where our boy is buried and we put flowers on his grave, whether it rains or not."

"When the war broke out we were living on the same farm as now," said he. "I wanted to shoulder my old squirt-rifle and go with the boys, but our son Bill said he was young and for me to stay at home and care for mother, while he went to the war.
I at last consented and one morning, after breakfast, Billie hugged and kissed us and with his brave blue eyes brimming with tears, left us standing in the old doorway, while he with his company disappeared behind a distant hill."

"Two weeks afterward, we received word that our darling boy was lying wounded in a southern hospital. The first thing we did was to cry a little and then I went off and brought Billie back. He lived but a day, and our humble home was more desolate than ever."

"We buried him over yonder in Crown Hill, and rain or shine, we go there every year and put flowers on his grave."

"I don't care," said the old man, half sobbing, "if it rains pitchforks, my old woman and me intend to keep his grave green, even if we have to paint it."

The ludicrous ending of so pathetic a story was more than Reed and Nye's resiliencies could stand, and they laughed aloud despite themselves.

"Bill Nye once related this story, in his inimitable way, at a press club banquet tendered him in Topeka, Kansas, some years ago," said Mr.
Thornton, "and there was not a dry eye in the audience, so happily blended were the pathetic and ridiculous."

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A number of young ladies and gentlemen gave a surprise party last evening to Mr. Nichols at the residence of his uncle, Mr. E. E. Sapington, 604 North Monticau street.
It being the anniversary of his birthday. At 10 o'clock the guests were invited into the dining room where an elegant supper consisting of strawberries, ice cream, cake and lemonade was served, to which ample justice was done. After supper a short time was spent in pleasant games when they departed wishing Lee many happy returns.

IN THE POLICE COURT.

There are three chaps who will not witness the circus to-day. They are Bobby Burns, Robert Kilmer and Ed. Vanderve and they will put in the day on the rock pile. "Bobby" Burns was arrested late last night and had in his possession a villanous looking revolver. Judge Halstead let him down light and only fined him $25.
Kilmer was drunk, in fact he was so drunk that he could hardly tell his name.
He was assessed $5, while Vanderve was fined the same amount for keeping late hours. Rosa Wells and Lulu Turpin came before his honor and entered a plea of guilty. They were fined $20 each and given a stay of execution until 6 o'clock to-morrow evening to leave the city.
